TrembTRACKER Dealer Network Growing by Leaps and Bounds

Wow! What a great quarter we had. The reality is that this product sells itself. Not to be seen as an arrogant statement, but once you understand all the advantages of this product it translates into a suite of positive results. Imagine, not only can you track your stolen equipment, you can also offer a piece of mind for the partner who stays at home by having them receive location messages. Not to mention the operational solutions for rental and demonstration purposes.

Cable Option: Electrical System Monitoring

The TrembTRACKER external monitoring cable extends the functionality of the base unit by allowing you to monitor up to two electrical systems on your asset to determine if the systems are on or off. This can be useful for determining if there is a urgent situation that needs to be attended to such as an alarm system has been activated on a motor home, a bilge pump has been activated on a boat, a cooling unit has failed on a reefer trailer, or virtually any other electrical system you can think of. This monitoring can be accomplished using one of two different reporting modes: State Change Reporting, which sends reports every time the electrical system is turned on or off or Undesired State Reporting, which sends messages at predefined intervals for as long as the electrical system is in the undesired state.

The Importance of Activation

Why activate your unit? Well, first of all you should catch a glimpse of it reporting on your computer using Google Earth. Not only it will show you the map location, it will also display a picture of the scenery. If your unit is in storage, docked or parked away from your home you will be at ease knowing that it hasn't moved. These units can be ordered with custom programming to report 1, 3, 6 or 12 times a day depending on your customers needs.

Please note that the standard reporting is 3 times per day. If your customers require more or less reports the monthly cost will change. We would be happy to work with you to get your clients the best possible mix of service and value.
